Biography

Little is known about the life of one of the crew members who discovered the Western Continent. After his sanctification, much legend and much truth were mixed up and became practically indistinguishable.

His real name would be Pedro Elmo, and according to various sources, he was one of the childhood friends of the famous explorer, Fabio Sachs, although due to their differences for being from different social classes (Several sources mention that Elmo came from a family of very poor sailors) had to separate and it was not until many years later, in 1300 to be precise, that they would meet again. By years later, this would join the expedition that would discover the Western Continent.

It is known, that his key moment, was near the Eastern Coast, when the crew had to face an unknown weather phenomenon (which was later named after him, the St. Elmo's lights) which altered the navigation compass, But thanks to Elmo's intelligence and knowledge, the ship was not lost and they managed to reach the new continent.

Some time later, it seems that it would be sanctified due to such a noble act and worshipped long after by the colonizers of the new world, especially the sailors and the musicians.

His death was confirmed by Putnam Pitch, the last living member of the expedition during the 1450s but the cause of death is unknown.

Trivia

- His cult would be very popular in Fabiola until the death of Putnam Pitch in 1555.
- This character is a mixture of the canon version of Saint Elmo, Erasmus of Formia and Peter González.
- Erasmus of Formia, known as St. Elmo, is one of the Fourteen Holy Helpers in the Christian tradition, patron of sailors and abdominal pain.
